13:18:39 From David Bloniarz : Welcome, Zbigniew!

13:22:40 From Wai Lee to All panelists : It is great to hear the familiar iTree teacher voices.

13:32:21 From treerap to All panelists : What percentage of the community are people who have backyards and, if this is not a good representation of the more general public, have you considered involving the public in a more publicly representative sampling?

13:33:30 From Elliot Lopez Capitan Playa Ojo de Agua Manati to All panelists : To Sofia. How your team select the houses or places to do the field inventory ?

13:42:59 From Pedro Mendes Castro to All panelists : Was it necessary to adapt the i-tree algorithms to the local conditions in Puerto Rico? How it was done?

13:44:36 From Akshat Tyagi to All panelists : How many people did you get to collect field data? And how did you get them on board to help you? How many were volunteers and how many were paid staff?

13:45:37 From David Bloniarz : Agata Kryjak 01:41 PM
Thank you very much for this fantastic presentation! What type of tree / palm presents the biggest target to the storm?

13:49:55 From Gabriel Agosto to All panelists : Hi, in Sofia Olivero's work, is there a difference between wetland ecosystem services and inventory vs upland tropical forests present in San Juan?

13:51:10 From Heather Barrar, FOLAR to All panelists : All the panelists have been fabulous. Thanks for a great session, I enjoyed it and learned so much!

13:51:21 From Walter to All panelists : a lot has been discussed about hurricane affects on the natural eco-system(s) of Puerto Rico, however I am curious, what affects and/or research was done with the earthquakes?

13:53:43 From David Bloniarz to Damian A Olmo Lopez, All Panelists :
Damian.. you have a question.
